PICNIC AT NORTH SHORE

Find and circle all the 'or' words

It was six o'clock in the morning, and I packed a picnic. He was sorting the food, finding snacks for their big day out on the beach. "Oh! Before I forget, I need to find the picnic basket!" said Harry. "I'll go and pack the food for me?" said Harry. Just as Harry was almost finished packing, his little sister, Jess, ran into the kitchen. "What's your face?"

"Let me help too!" asked Jess.

"No, you'll make us late!" Harry said. "You're being a thorn in my side!"

Jess grabbed a cork from the picnic basket. "What do you do?" she asked.

"I don't know," Jess said.

"Harry tried to grab the picnic basket," Jess said.

"Don't touch me, first!" Jess said.

"Please, just let me help!" Jess said.

"Okay, Jess," Harry said.

Jess's face lit up.

PICNIC AT NORTH SHORE

Find and circle all the 'or' words.

It was six o'clock in the morning, and Harry was helping his dad pack for a picnic. He was sorting the drinks, packing the forks, and finding snacks for their big day out at the north shore.

"Oh! Before I forget, I need to find the picnic blanket. Finish packing the food for me?" said Harry's dad.

Just as Harry was almost finished packing for their big day out, his little sister, Jess, ran into the kitchen with a horn and blew it in his face.

"Let me help too!" asked Jess.

"No, you'll make us late!" Harry said. "I need to finish packing for dad. You're being a thorn in my side."

Jess grabbed a cork from the bench and threw it at Harry.

"Don't tell me what to do!" she cried.

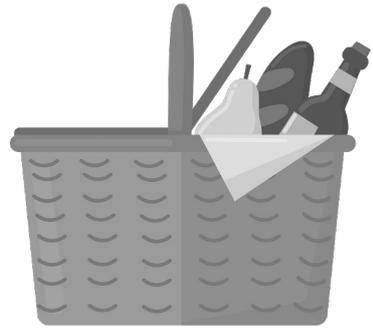

Then Jess grabbed a cob of corn and threw it on the ground. Harry tried to grab Jess, but she was too short. Jess then grabbed the pork sandwiches and held them above her head.

"Don't touch me, first-born, or I'll throw this on the ground too! Please, just let me help," Jess asked.

"Okay, okay. You can help. And your first job is to pick up all that corn!"

Jess's mouth formed into a big smile. "Alright, alright!"
