THEO THE MOTH

Find and circle the words with 'th' in them.

Theo was a moth flying home. It had been a long day, and he needed a bath and to brush his teeth before bed. He worked in a moth shop, doing sales math to finish the month, there was lots of math to finish. As he flew along the forest path, he looked at his mother.

Suddenly—thump! Theo crashed into a tree. He looked down and saw a sharp thorn caught in his hair. Theo tried to think. What could he do? Then he had an idea! He grabbed an acorn and threw it off with his thumbs. He threw it at the branch. The branch shook, and Theo pushed himself up. "Thank you, acorn!" Theo said, then flew home.

THEO THE MOTH

Find and circle the words with 'th' in them.

Theo was a moth flying home. It had been a long day, and he needed a bath and to brush his teeth before bed.

He worked in a moth shop, doing sales math. Since it was the end of the month, there was lots of math to finish, so Theo left work late.

As he flew along the forest path, he looked forward to seeing his mother.

Suddenly—thump! Theo crashed into a thick branch and got stuck. He looked down and saw a sharp thorn caught on his wing.

Theo tried to think. What could he do?

Then he had an idea! He grabbed an acorn tree and pulled an acorn off with his thumbs. He threw it at the branch.

The branch shook, and Theo pushed himself free of the thorn!

"Thank you, acorn!" Theo said, then flew home.

THEO THE MOTH

Find and circle the words with 'th' in them.

Theo was a moth flying home after a long day at work. He was tired and looking forward to a warm bath and brushing his teeth before bed.

He worked in a moth shop, where he did all the sales math. Since it was the end of the month, there were extra numbers to check. Theo stayed late, working through stacks of math problems. His thoughts were fuzzy from all the numbers.

As he flew along the forest path, he looked forward to seeing his mother. She always made thick bowls of soup on cold nights.

Thinking about it made his wings flap faster.

Suddenly—THUMP! Theo thrashed against a thick branch. His tiny legs kicked, but he couldn't move. He looked down and gasped—his wing was stuck on a sharp thorn!

He tried to think. What could he do? He couldn't stay there all night! First, he tried pulling, but the thorn dug in deeper. Then, he tried twisting, but that just hurt more. "This is a thorny problem," Theo sighed.

Then he had an idea! He spotted an acorn hanging from a tree branch nearby. Using his thumbs, he threw an acorn at the branch. It hit with a small thud.

The branch shook, and Theo pushed with all his strength. The thorn tore free!

"Thank you, acorn!" Theo said.

He flapped his wings, making sure they still worked, and then he flew home. His mother was waiting at the door with a thick blanket and a bowl of soup.

"What happened, Theo?" she asked.

"Oh, nothing much," Theo said with a smile. "Just a little thorny adventure!"
